I. Respecting the liability of the defendant driver, the evidence warranted a finding of facts to this effect. This defendant, traveling northerly on the east side of Elm Street in a compact part of Manchester, stopped at its intersection with Spruce street to meet the command of red lights. When they turned to green she proceeded on her way, passing the intersection of Lake avenue. At this point a car turned from the avenue into Elm street and was driven northerly along the right side of the defendants car but not ahead or quite abreast of it. Between 25 and 30 feet northerly of the Lake avenue intersection there was a cross-walk from one side of Elm street to the other, and beyond it cars were parked along the curb. The left side of the front of the defendants car struck the plaintiff while he was walking from the east to west side of Elm street on the cross-walk. The driver did not see him until the car was about three feet from him.
