JAMES M ENKEL V NORTHWEST AIRLINES EBOOKS 2019

Author: Supreme Court of Minnesota

Realese Date: Expected @@expectedReleaseDate@@

On January 28, 1944, relator was employed by respondent Northwest Airlines, Inc. in its storeroom. On that day he fell to the floor from some boxes on which he had been standing, landed on his back, and was injured. As a result, he was temporarily totally disabled. Compensation was paid him on that basis until September 18, 1944. Relator filed a claim petition for additional compensation on December 7, 1944. The referee awarded compensation to and including February 14, 1945, the date of hearing, "payments to continue thereafter as such disability shall warrant, subject to the provisions and limitations of the Minnesota Workmens Compensation Act." The employer and its insurer appealed to the industrial commission, which modified the award of the referee and cut off the compensation and benefits as of February 15, 1945. On petition of employe a writ of certiorari was issued.
