When a police sergeant resigns rather than face disciplinary proceedings that would adversely affect his application for a Chief of Police job in another city, the sergeant voluntarily quit his job and is disqualified from receiving unemployment benefits. Wozniak, Judge James M. Seacrist filed for unemployment benefits with the Department of Economic Security. A department claims deputy denied benefits because Seacrist voluntarily quit his job. The Appeals Tribunal also denied benefits but on grounds of an involuntary termination for misconduct. The Commissioner's representative affirmed, not on grounds of misconduct, however, but a voluntary termination. Seacrist appeals to this court.
